

TALKS AGAINST CUTTING WAGES OF LABORERS

(By Associated Press)

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 24—

Arguments against reduction of pay of laboring men were voiced by P. H. McCarthy, San Francisco, president of the State Building Trades Council of California, at the organization's twenty-first annual convention here today.

"We are told that prices of commodities are declining and therefore wages of the working classes should be reduced," he said. "If there has been a diminution of prices, it has rebounded to the advantage of the dealers, and, as yet, has not benefited the masses to any appreciable extent.

"Besides, the increase in wages has never kept pace with the increase in the cost of living, and it will require a complete readjustment of the cost of living before wages and the cost of living reach a plane of equality.

"If wages of those in the building industry had increased in the same proportion as the price of the products of the manufacturers, the wage earners would have been enabled to lay aside a reserve fund and would be in a position to tide over the temporary privations incident to a reduction of wages. But because the increase in the cost of living was proportionately far greater than the increase in wages, the working classes have been able to eke out a bare existence, and today their financial condition is more precarious than it has been in many years."

Mr. McCarthy said the past year has been a most eventful one in the building industry of California. He declared that due to "extraneous influences and unfavorable environment" the spirit of co-operation between employer and employee underlying the State Building Trades Council and its affiliated locals has several times been taxed to the utmost.

He reviewed attempts of the Builders' Exchange of San Francisco to lock out union members and declared the fight of the unions in the matter was successful. A large portion of his address was devoted to criticism of certain builders who, he said, are "actuated by a desire to prey upon the owner and to exploit his complacency or inexperience."

Charges have been made by opponents of the unions, he declared, that the cost of building was high because of the conduct of the artisans, mechanics and laborers. Men have been accused of lack of efficiency and of doing less work than they did in the past. Mr. McCarthy denied these charges with the declaration that the building trades councils have "jealously watched over and protected the building industry and have not permitted and will not now permit the owners to be exploited."

"We have no patience with those arrogant hypocrites who, having raised the cost of building by criminal combinations and conspiracies, are blaming the men of labor for their own misdeeds and are attempting to convince the public that the cost of building can be reduced only by lowering the wages of the workmen," he said. "Men convicted of participation in criminal conspiracies to raise costs of building materials pretend the wages paid to workmen are responsible for that condition. Has there ever been greater effrontery than this?"

Mr. McCarthy declared efforts are being made all over the country to establish the open shop. He urged the union men to stand together closer than ever before.
